SACAMORE HILL, Sept 20th 1910

To the Hon. John W. Langley
My dear Mr. Langley,
I sincerely regret that I can not do as you ask and speak for you in your district this fall. Unfortunately it is physically impossible.
I would gladly do
anything in my power
to help you win, because you were my staunch friend, and loyally

HON. JOHN W. LANGLEY, WHOSE CANDIDACY FOR CONGRESS HAS BEEN ENDORSED BY THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

supported my administration throughout your term of service in Congress,
while I was President.

You have been a faithful
and useful Representative;
you are a square man,
and you stand openly
and without dodging,
for the great and vital policies that are essential to the well-being of all our people.

With hearty good wishes,
I am

CONGRESSMAN LANGLEY

AS SEEN BY THE PRESS

HON. JOHN W. LANGLEY.

A Good Friend From Kentucky of the Veterans.

Hon. John W. Langley, of Spurlock Ky., who is now serving his second term in Congress, has a fine record of friendliness to the veterans. He was born in Floyd county, Ky., received his education there and then began teaching school. He studied law and received the first prize in two universities, and the degrees of Bachelor of Laws, Master of Laws, Doctor of the Civil Law and Master of Diplomacy. He next accepted a position in the Pension Bureau and became a member of the Board of Appeals, but left this to become Disbursing and Appointment Clerk of the Census Office. He also served two terms in the Legislature and was twice a delegate from Kentucky to the Republican National Convention. Therefore, he is an unusually well equipped, all-around man, familiar with public business, and a valuable Representative both for his abilities in Congress and his capacity to serve his constituents. While in the Department in Washington and since he has been in Congress he has been looked upon as a steadfast, reliable friend of veterans. He could always be appealed to with confidence in securing employment for old soldiers when he was in a position to influence appointments.

Since he has been in the House he has introduced a great number of pension bills and among them many of a general nature, such as The National Tribune pension bill; granting pensions to the veterans of the Spanish war and their widows, minor children and dependant parents; granting pensions to militiamen who were disabled in service; granting a pension of 50 cents a day to the widow of any officer or man who died or shall die by reason of wounds or disabilities contracted in the service; granting $2 a day for each day of confinement to those who were in rebel prisons; one granting a pension of $1 a day to every one who served 90 days in the civil war, and others of like nature, besides numerous private pension bills. He has made very effective speeches in the present session of Congress in support of these bills. Such is the popularity of Mr. Langley in his district that his majority has increased wonderfully at every time he has come up for reelection.—(Washington National Tribune, May 26, 1910.)

INJUSTICE TO INDIAN DESCENDANTS.

Special to Courier-Journal:
WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 13.

During the discussion of the Indian appropriation bill in the House today Representative Langley, of Kentucky, made a speech on the subject of the administration of the estate of the five civilized tribes. He referred more particularly to the cases of the descendants of the Choctaws, Chickasaws and Cherokees, many of whom live in his congressional district. He reviewed briefly the legislation on the subject, and contended that injustice had been done the descendants of these tribes, not only by acts of Congress, but by the action of the executive officers of the Government in excluding from consideration in making the final enrollment, a number of rolls upon which he said appeared the names of the ancestors of his constituents.

Mr. Langley called attention to the bill which he introduced recently providing that these claimants should be given the privilege of establishing their rights in the courts of the United States, and insisted that some such legislation as this ought to be promptly enacted, in order that the whole controversy, which he termed "discreditable to the Government," might be settled once for all.

Upon the conclusion of Mr. Langley's address, Vice President-elect Sherman, who is chairman of the House Committee on Indian Affairs and who has charge of the Indian appropriation bill in the House, took the floor and proceeded to take issue with Mr. Langley on some of his statements. A rather sharp and interesting colloquy ensued between them, Mr. Sherman contending that Mr. Langley had criticized unduly the Administration and the Committee on Indian Affairs. Mr. Langley insisted that his remarks had been misunderstood by Mr. Sherman, so far as the application of his criticisms to his (Mr. Sherman's) committee was concerned, but at the same time he reiterated his assertion that the records show that injustice had been done to many claimants. Mr. Sherman conceded that some injustice had been done, but argued that it was not sufficient gravity to justify reopening the whole subject of the enrollment of these Indians.

The colloquy was of interest in that it indicated that the question of the distribution of the estate of the five civilized Indian tribes is to be the subject of further consideration in Congress. Mr. Langley concedes that no legislation on the subject can be secured at this session, but he says that he expects to continue the fight in the next Congress.

Representative Stephens, of Texas, who is also one of the champions of the Indians in Congress will address the House on Monday, and it is understood that he will combat some of the statements made by Mr. Sherman today.

LANGLEY SPEAKS OUT.

Special to Cincinnati Enquirer.

WASHINGTON, April 6, 1909.—Representative Langley, of the Tenth Kentucky District, who took a leading part in the fight in the House for a more equitable distribution of the protective features of the Payne bill, made a speech in the House from the standpoint of the Southern Republicans, which is attracting a great deal of attention. He called attention to the fact that the leading industries of his section are either placed upon the free list or given inadequate protection. He referred more especially to lumber, coal, iron ore, hemp and flour spar, and contended that the provisions of the bill regarding these industries are not in harmony with the doctrines of the Republican party as heretofore expounded by the leaders of that party.

He argued for the retention of the duty of $2 on lumber, and said that he thought that this duty should be increased rather than decreased if it was the purpose of his party to give proper protection to this industry. His discussion of the lumber question was especially pointed. He showed that it is the second largest industry in the United States, and more important even than the iron and steel industry, in the sense that the ownership of timber is more diversified, embracing almost every State and territory in the Union, and that therefore any legislation that would tend to injure this industry could injure a greater number of people than adverse legislation touching any other industry in the country.

He said that he was unalterably opposed to taxing tea and coffee, which are two of the necessities of life, and added that a tariff on these articles could only be for the purpose of raising revenue, as they did not need protection, and declared that he was in favor of putting an additional tax upon beer and whisky rather than on these articles. He did not say that he would vote against the bill, but warned the committee that if the bill was defeated it would be due to the fact that it had not been framed in accordance with the Republican platform nor with the traditional doctrines of the Republican party.

In his blind fold carriage drive the Professor will announce from in front of the theatre while his committee is gone to hide where the articles is to be found the first article. Here is an article from Beckley Messenger:

A fair sized audience attended the initial performance given by Prof. Gallano in the opera house last night. His first feat was the finding of a tobacco box and a coin taken from the opera house by a committee and hidden on opposite sides of the road near Sprague. The professor followed the committee, blindfolded, in a carriage succeeding in locating the hidden articles without little difficulty. The performance at the opera house was above the average despite the fact that the order maintained by the audience lacked much of being perfect. At the close of the entertainment, the Professor hypnotized
